

The US–China trade gap stands out among US trade relationships

In nominal terms, the deficit trends downward after China entered the World Trade Organization in December 2001, quadrupling since 2000. While population weighting reduces the deficit somewhat, it does not change this trend.

Data Source: United States Census Bureau