

US exports to China come from the rust belt and rural industries

As of 2017, US exports to China mostly consist of vehicles and agricultural products – both primarily from rural and midwest industrial hubs. These regions have been targeted by Chinese tariffs.

Data Source: UN Comtrade International Trade Statistics Database