

The states rely heavily on Chinese market access for imports and exports

In 2017, a plurality of states counted China their primary trade partner, with imports and exports with China alone representing four to eight percent of state gross domestic product (GDP).

The dotted balanced-trade line indicates very few states run a surplus with China.

